Bromley Directory

Courses September 2012

Introduction

Dear Student

This booklet comes to you with the compliments of 'Bromley 14-19'. This is a partnership of Bromley Schools, Colleges of Further Education and Work-based Training Providers who are working closely together to provide you with advice on the widest possible choice of courses for your 16-19 studies.

The booklet provides you with an overview of the range of courses in different subjects and at different levels that are available to you across Bromley for September 2012. So, whether you are interested in a one-year course or in continuing your studies to an advanced level over the next two to three years, we are hoping that you will find something to suit your interests and future plans.

Contact details for Bromley Schools, Colleges and Work-based Training Providers and the dates of their open events are provided throughout the booklet. For further information on any of the advertised courses simply contact the provider directly by telephone or through their website.

Advice on the courses which best suit you will be available from your own teacher and tutors and your school Careers Co-ordinator.

For further information and advice, contact Directgov Careers Advisor telephone and callback service on 0808 001 3219.

The courses advertised are correct at the time of printing, but slight changes may occur during the year.

We wish you well in your studies this year and hope that you will find this booklet useful in deciding what and where you would like to study next.

Yours sincerely

Beverley Johnston

Director, Bromley 14-19

The Directgov - young people website can also be reached by visiting www.bromley.gov.uk

Calls from a landline are free. Calls from a mobile are charged but if you ring on a mobile they will call you back.

If you wish to search on-line for courses, then you can use the new course search website by visiting www.ucasprogress.com

Learners with Learning Difficulties and/or Disabilities

If you are a learner with learning difficulties and/or disabilities leaving school, you may receive help through a Transition Support Worker. This can be arranged by your school. They can provide advice and practical help on several matters, including further education, training, voluntary work and employment. Young people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities can continue to receive support up to their 25th birthday.

Special schools in Bromley offer 16-19 courses for their students and these are Marjorie McClure, Riverside and Glebe Schools. Students follow courses provided by the schools which most suit their needs and interests.

Colleges also have a range of courses and can provide additional support on mainstream courses. Most colleges also provide special courses which have smaller class sizes. It may also be possible to attend a specialist college if local colleges are unable to meet the young person's needs.

Students may wish to use this brochure to explore a range of course options in other 16-19 schools and colleges and should discuss their plans with their school tutor and the Transition Support Worker.

Learning Providers have to make reasonable adjustments for disabled people in line with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Examples of reasonable adjustments include alternative exam arrangements, extra support with planning during exam and assessment periods and access to a quiet room.
